Dani Anderson is a redshirt sophomore on the women's basketball team. Anderson comes to the Warhawks from Oak Grove, La.

Anderson decided to play basketball for ULM because it was close to home and it was a smaller, close knit campus.

Anderson is majoring in health studies management and marketing with a minor in business with dreams of working in the administration of a nursing home. Her inspiration towards that endeavor was when she saw her cousin work with her great grandma as a home nurse. Anderson also had the opportunity to grow her skills towards her career through an internship at the senior center in West Monroe, La.

Basketball has helped motivate Anderson to stay in school and do something more with her life as well as how to work and communicate with other people. She recognizes that not everyone takes criticism the same way and that you have to learn people's personality and how to talk to that individual.

DID YOU KNOW

-Anderson was raised on a farm

-Both of her parents played basketball

-In junior high Anderson played tennis, soccer, softball, basketball and did bail racing. When she got to high school she was limited to what sports she was able to playing and she chose basketball and bail racing. With the addition of basketball being played in the winter and not riding as much in the winter, she chose those two because basketball was a way that she connected with her mom and bail racing was a way that she connected with her dad.

ADVICE

Cherish every opportunity that you have. You never know when your last game will be or if you will play the next game. Every moment, take advantage of it and do the best that you can.
